

Client: Film Education
Source: Bristol Observer (South West)
Date: 22 October 2009
Page: 5
Circulation: 44763
Size: 215cm2
Value: 913.75

TALENTED: Harry Keen, seven, has won a Young Film Critic of the Year award for his poster design for the film Bee Movie. Harry is with brothers Bailey, five, and Josh, nine, and dad Terry and mum Kelly

Harry's poster success

A BRISLINGTON boy will have his own moment in the spotlight after a poster he drew was nominated for a film industry award.

Seven-year-old Harry Keen of Belroyal Avenue, Brislington, drew a scene from Bee Movie after watching the film at the cinema with his school as part of Film Education Week.

Teachers entered the poster into a junior film critic award and it has been shortlisted. At seven, Harry is the youngest contender in his category, which goes up to age 11.

Young Harry saw off some tough competition as Film Education, which runs the awards, receives thousands of entries every year.

Now Harry, his parents, Kelly, 30 and Terry, 31, and his two brothers Josh, nine and Bailey, five, are all heading up to London on Thursday for a swish awards ceremony to be held at BAFTA.

Blue Peter presenter Joel Defries will be hosting the ceremony, while actors Bill Nighy and Tom Felton, who plays Draco Malfoy in the Harry Potter movies, are both rumoured to be going along. Harry, who is yet to write an acceptance speech in case he wins, said: "It's very cool to be nominated but I'm going to let Mum do the talking on stage.

"The ceremony is two hours so it will probably get a bit boring. We do art at school now and I love Art Attack. I like writing stories, too."

Mrs Keen, a part-time legal secretary, said: "We were chuffed to bits when his teacher rang to say he'd been nominated. We both know he loves drawing and making things."

Elder brother Josh prefers to leave the art to his brother, however.

"Harry's very creative. I'm more into sports," he said.